Tremblay again voted mayor of Montreal

POLITICS As early poll results came in last night for an election that focused more on corruption than city issues, incumbent Gerald Tremblay was re-elected as the mayor of Montreal.

Early results last night showed Tremblay, with less than 40 per cent of the popular vote, triumphed over ex-Parti Québécois cabinet minister Louise Harel and dark horse candidate Richard Bergeron.

A scandal involving allegrations of dealings between the Mafia, local construction contractors and politicians dominated much of the election.

Critics, backers to lock horns over Lansdowne

TIM WIECLAWSKI tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

While stories about the H1N1 virus have pushed the public debate over the proposed redevelopment of Lansdowne Park onto the back burner, rhetoric from both sides will pick up again leading up to a special city council meeting on Nov. 12 to discuss the issue.

Proponents of the $250million plan to renovate Frank Clair Stadium and build a retail complex in one corner of the park insist the project is at worst, revenue neutral for taxpavers. Their plan, they say, will revitalize the park, increase property values in the area and propel business in the Glebe.

Dissidents argue that Ottawa residents will straddle a huge debt for a football stadium and shopping complex in an unsuitable location that will threaten local business.

To pay for the project, the city would have to take on at least $117 million in debt. Ian Lee, director of the MBA program at the Sprott School of Business at Carleton University and one of the most vocal opponents, figures the total repayment cost of that loan would reach $280 million if it were financed over a 40-year term with 5.35 per cent interest.

"The city is going into debt, which will be repaid by taxpayer money," said Lee, "and on top of that, we are giving away 25 per cent of the park to build retail and commercial stuff.

With cases of H1N1 continuing to rise and the health system stretching to the limit, Ottawa Public Health is preparing to launch flu centres in the capital, Ottawa's medical officer of health Dr. Isra Levy said over the weekend.

"We continue to see an increase in cases of H1N1 in Ottawa," said Levy. "While most cases are mild, several of our partners in the health-care system have informed us that their capacity to deal with their caseload continues to be stretched.'

In a letter to the mayor and members of the board of health, Levy said Ottawa Public Health will work with health-care partners and community health centres to set up flu assessment centres throughout

The centres, which will be staffed by local doctors and health professionals who can assess and treat people with influenza-like illness, are intended as an alternative to local emergency rooms and are primarily for people who cannot access a family doctor and whose symptoms are not severe enough to require an emergency room consultation, Levy

"These centres are designed to provide assessment and care for ill people, not for vaccination of the well population," Levy stated. "We are working with the clinic operators towards the clinics becoming operational soon.'

By the end of the week-end, the city had delivered more than 80,000 doses of the H1N1 vaccine.

Injured in serious, critical condition after collisions

TRACEY TONG tracey.tong@metronews.ca

A young person was killed and seven others ranging in age from 13 to 23 critically and seriously injured in two separate motor vehicle collisions, both involving SUVs striking trees yesterday morning.

At approximately 3:15
a.m., paramedics responded to a single-vehicle rollover at the intersection of Island Park Drive and the Ottawa River Parkwav.

Police said the vehicle was travelling from the Quebec side of the interprovincial bridge coming into Ontario. The vehicle went over a curb into a grassed median and collidm.metrenews.ca ed with a large tree, where it flipped and caught fire, police said.

Four males were critically injured, including a 21-year-old with critical head and facial injuries and an open fracture to his right arm; a male in his 20s with critical head and facial injuries and injuries to his abdomen; a male in his 20s with critical head injuries and multiple fractures to his left leg and right shoulder and a male in his 20s with injuries to his abdomen and chest.

One of the victims later died in hospital.

Paramedics believe only one person in the vehicle was wearing their seatbelt.

At 8 a.m., four young teens were seriously injured after their SUV struck a tree at an unknown speed at the intersection of Resthaven and Woods in the Constance Bay area.

There were six people in the vehicle. While two people suffered minor injuries, three boys, ages 13, 15 and 16, suffered serious injuries while a 16-year-old girl is in stable condition.

Police are investigating the collisions.

ROBBERY Police are seeking three men after a man said he was robbed after asking for directions early yesterday morning. At 1 a.m., a male requested assistance from residents of a home in the 2000 block of Iris Street in the Pinecrest area. Police said the victim asked for directions from three unknown males when he was assaulted and demands for his cellphone and wallet were made. One male was allegedly armed with a knife and threatened that he had another. The victim suffered slight injuries and fled to the nearby residence to request assistance. Police are seeking three black males. INJURIES Police have two men in custody while they investigate what they believe to be an assault with a weapon yesterday. Two males in their early 20s are in police custody pending the outcome of the investigation. CUSTODY Police have four people in custody following a robbery on Craig Henry Drive Saturday. Police said the victim was outside his home just after noon when four people with a baseball bat and pellet pistol arrived. The man was allegedly assaulted. The victim called police immediately after the incident, enabling a patrol officer to apprehend four people without further incident. The victim was treated for non-life-threatening injuries in hospital. Three men in their 20s and a 19-yearold woman appeared in court yesterday. Police believe the victim and accused are known to one another.

Tremblay re-elected | Karzai's challenger quits

Retains title of Montreal mayor despite Mob allegations

Gerald Tremblay was reelected mayor of Montreal yesterday despite a campaign dominated by wild allegations of corruption involving the Mob and construction companies.

The campaign saw little of the usual rhetoric about municipal issues such as public transit and property

It was all about corruption, as the city reverberated with allegations of dealings between the Mafia, construction companies and politicians.

Polls leading up to voting day revealed a virtual three-way tie, with the three candidates all claiming to be the best person to root out corruption.

Finding 5 reasons to love November couple years ago my partner Liz and I had a really big fight. And, like most really big fights, it was about a really small thing.

We were choosing new carpeting for the hallway. Liz wanted a shade called "vanilla." I said this was a ridiculous choice. I insisted on "toasted almond." Truthfully, I'm not sure the difference between these two colours was visible to the naked eye. That didn't keep us from standing over the rolled up remains of our old carpet screaming, "Vanilla!" And "Toasted Almond!"

There's only one thing that can turn two reasonable, happily married people into raving harpies. It was November.

Come these dark, dismal days of late fall, we human beings get testy.

Appropriately, Nov. 2 in Catholic tradition is Holy Souls day, dedicated to remembering "souls in purgatory."

That means "people stuck on the bus on Nov. 2 in the rain heading to a staff budget meeting." Nov. 2 is also national adoption day.

I used to get pretty excited about that until I realized it didn't mean someone was going to take my kids for 24 hours.

If we're go to make it through the month with anyone still talking to us, we need help. So here are: Five Reasons to Love November:

- 1. It's a well-known fact that calories consumed during November don't count. OK, I made that up, but admit it, you felt better for a minute.
- 2. November has fascinating trivia attached to it. For instance, the month of November and the month of March both begin on the same day of the week. You heard it here.

- 3. There are no holidays this month that require you to cook someone dinner or buy them gifts, cards or chocolates. Mind you, there are no holidays that require someone else to do that for you either. Never a perfect world, eh?
- 4. It's finally possible to get that really great table on your favourite outdoor patio. Getting served there may be more difficult.

5. It's not February.

If you know another reason to love November, email me and I'll share them in a future column.

Till then, remember these words of wisdom: "Those who value peace, choose their carpet colour in June."

More detours erected for Ottawa transit

Last week wasn't a conspicuously good one for public transit in Ottawa, as the city's $6.6-billion long-term plan to expand the system fell victim once again to skittishness at senior levels of government.

It may not have been surprising to see Ontario's deficit-wracked provincial premier pour ice water on our downtown light rail and tunnel scheme, but it was certainly dismaying. The city was counting on the province and the feds to each foot a third of the bill. Looks like the route to the future of public transportation in Ottawa will have to be re-mapped once again.

I, for one, will be quite excited to see what the new, new transit plan. By the time it comes to fruition, though, I'm almost certain I'll be riding on a discounted senior's pass. More troubling news this week as the city suspended the procurement of the Smart Bus system, which featured automatic callouts of stops. This gadgetry, you may recall, started with a $6-million price tag that soon inflated to $17 million. Council now has to make an unappetizing choice between cancelling the procurement outright and being sued by U.S. contractor Clever Devices, which won the contract, or going ahead with it and being sued by unsuccessful bidder Bell Canada.

Our other high-tech new toys, the diesel-electric hybrid buses, were pulled off the road last week so a bug in their radio software can be patched.

Meanwhile, fares will be hiked yet again in July, an average of 7.5 per cent, and the transit budget, to be voted on this week, calls for a 12.7 per cent increase in funding from the city, which amounts to another $21 million.

This increase would necessitate an increase of 2.1 percentage points on property tax bills.

On the slightly less gloomy side, OC Transpo says that ridership almost returned to normal this spring, down only four per cent in June, as opposed to the 7.8 per cent chased off by last year's strike. Unfortunately that's hardly good enough, as they're counting on a ridership increase of 1.7 per cent in 2010 to make their budget numbers add up.

Duo's got super freaky theories

The followup to the bestseller Freakonomics the aptly named Superfreakonomics — has bare-ly hit the shelves, but it has already caused a whirlwind of controversy on the worldwide blogosphere.

Part of that debate has to do with one particular chapter on Al Gore, which is usually referred to as the Global Cooling chapter. Journalist Stephen Dubner, one half of the feisty writing duo which includes Steven Levitt, explains himself to Metro.

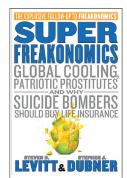

"I would never call myself a climate expert. Our first book was prominent, a bit of fun. Like whacking a piñata and seeing what comes out. I'm not a Sumo wrestler, nor a member of the Klu Klux Klan, nor a idea that you have to be in guild to comment on a situation," says Dubner.

"I don't know why everyone keeps calling it the Global Cooling chapter (The correct title being What do Al Gore and Mount Pinatubo have in common) ... There's been so much controversy surrounding our 'green' chap-ter simply due to the fact this is an industry with huge amounts at stake."

At the very beginning of the chapter, Dubner and Levitt do a backflip to the 1970s, when headlines were warning not of global warming, but of global cooling. That the situation could have so changed in the space of 40 years is surprising, and the two lead us into theories to cool the planet other than preventing climate change via cutting carbon emissions.

'We're heading towards cataclysm and carbon mitigation alone is not enough," explains Dubner. "The problem today is that people think that the global efforts made towards cutting carbon emissions mean they can go about their lives as normal, its almost an excuse for them to pollute. Expedition in pursuit of plankton

NADIA LODDO Metro World News

Science takes time. Patience. Stamina.

In the middle of the Mediterranean, the schooner Tara is at the beginning of a three-year odyssey around the world: A 150,000-kilometre long expedition to explore the invisible world of the Participating scientists: More than 100 people on land and 22 scientific co-ordi-

"These organisms are responsible for absorbing 50 per cent of the CO2 emissions on the Earth and producing 50 per cent of the oxygen we breathe but we only know one per cent of them: This expedition is about discovering the remaining 99 per cent."

Oceans are the major factor influencing climate, as they work as carbon pumps to a greater extent than rainforests do.

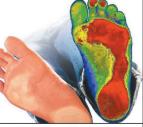

Every other day, the boat stops for a 12-hour scientific station — pumping, filtering, sorting and belling. The five researchers on board usually have a long day during this exercise. Over 1,000 litres of sea water are pumped on board and filtered in the wet lab to separate the different kind of sea plankton: viruses, bacteria and protista.

The Tara Oceans expedition is sponsored by the United Nations Environment Program (UNEP). The 34-metre schooner has a mythical past: it was designed and sailed by the French explorer Jean-Louis Etienne, then by sir Peter Blake, and now under the command of Etienne Bourgois, CEO of the French designer company Agnès B.

The expedition costs 2.5 million euros for its logistics alone.

But the Earth is priceless," says Bourgois, whose Tara Foundation accounts for a great part of the budg-

New law upsets tobacco producers

U.S. burley lumped in with flavoured cigs

Tobacco advocates are seething over a new Canadian law they claim will snuff out sales of cigarettes packed with U.S. burley tobacco, and they are fighting back to protect their export sales.

They are asking U.S. trade officials to take their complaints to the World Trade Organization, hoping to pressure Canadians into protecting the burley variety from the tobacco crackdown. They also want to head off the spread of similar laws to other foreign markets that are crucial consumers of the American tobacco leaf.

Export markets are "absolutely critical" to the tobacco industry, and a spread of similar laws to other countries "could have an absolutely devastating economic impact" on the sector, said Erica Peterson, executive vice-president of the North Carolina Agribusiness Council.

The Canadian law won final approval this month. It is meant to curtail youth smoking in part by banning the sale of tobacco scented with fruit and candy flavours. U.S. tobacco supporters complain that the law overreached to cover burley, which is laced with flavours to smooth its harsh

"This act is far broader than necessary to meet its laudable objective," several tobacco groups said.

Autos Lexus to lease, not sell its new supercar

Toyota president Akio Toyoda introduces the Lexus LFA at the 41st Tokyo Motor Show in late October. Only 500 units of the LFA are to be produced and sold worldwide. The rare new Lexus, only 10 of which are available in Canada, comes with a unique caveat: it's not actually for sale. To forestall people buying the $375,000-plus US vehicle to resell it at a profit, Lexus will only lease the super-car.

Favre wins return to Lambeau Field

For the second time in less than a month, Brett Favre sliced up his former team and stuck it to the franchise that cast him aside as the Minnesota Vikings beat the Green Bay Packers 38-26 at Lambeau Field yesterday.

If walking out to waves of loud jeers from his former fans threw Favre off his game, it didn't last long. Despite being jeered repeatedly by Packers fans who once cheered his every move, Favre completed 17-of-28 passes for 244 yards and four touchdowns. The Vikings (7-1) took a firm hold on the NFC North standings.

Rookie receiver Percy
Harvin caught five passes for 84 yards and a touchdown and had five returns for 175 yards.

Vikings' defence The roughed up Favre's successor, Aaron Rodgers, sacking him six times. But with the Packers (4-3) on the verge of getting routed, Rodgers rebounded with three second-half touchdowns.

Despite the final score, it was an awkward homecoming for Favre, whose high-profile standoff with the front office split the loyalties of Packers fans last summer.

There weren't many signs of a split on yester-

Fans booed Favre loudly - first when he walked out of the tunnel for pregame warmups, then again when he ran out of the tunnel for the game, and on every snap during the Vikings' first few offensive possessions.

Hail the 'chief play officer' your typical corporate executive. He has the charm, work ethic and firm handshake. He even likes golf. But he also has tons of math homework and braces on his teeth.

The Uxbridge 13-yearold recently landed a dream job: "Chief play of-ficer" for Toys "R" Us Canada. The brown-eyed budding actor gets to play for a living — at least when he's not at school, on the hockey rink, singing at the piano or acting in community theatre.

Daniel is one of two appointments made in Canada to mark the toy chain's 25th anniversary here. He's got the title for English Canada while 13-yearold Laurie-Kim Gosselin of Mastouche, Que., has the job in French Canada.

Here's a profile of the new recruit a month into his one-year term.

Mission: To give his grownup colleagues The Kid Perspective and help parents wade through the toy jungle. "I'm the person who lets the adults know what the hot toys are this season.

Priorities: Talking up toys with kids and adult shoppers; announcing top picks for the holidays.

How: On Facebook and his blog. How else do teens communicate? But he's also an adolescent boy who talks in full sentences. Stay tuned for personal appearances.

SKILLED-TRADES SHORTAGE According to a recent study by the Canadian Apprenticeship Forum, there is a Canada-wide shortage of skilled tradespeople. Projections across the country estimate that beginning in 2003 and continuing through to 2015, there will be 913,000 skilled trade job openings. With more than 200 skilled trades in Canada, with particular shortages in the automotive service/repair and electrical and plumbing fields, there is plenty of need across the country for skilled trades workers. Certified automotive service technicians make around $17 an hour, while electrical trades workers make about $22 an hour. KNOWLEDGE-BASED PSE ENROLMENT Newly released data from Statistics Canada shows that three out of four high school students in Canada intending to work in a job requiring a university degree are aware of the education they will need. The data also shows that students' knowledge of educational requirements is linked to academic performance and socio-economic background. Higher university attendance rates were seen the earlier a student learned that a university degree was required for their field. HEATHER BUCHAN/

Judge orders trial for 3 in Smith case

COURTS Three key players in the troubled world of Playboy model Anna Nicole Smith have been ordered to stand trial after a hearing that plumbed the drug-fuelled depths of her final years and the alleged roles of her boyfriend and doctors in feeding her addiction to prescription

A judge ruled Friday there was sufficient evidence to try the defendants on charges of conspiring to give the reality TV star sedatives and opiates.

Defence lawyers had argued that lawyer Howard K. Stern, Dr. Sandeep Kapoor and psychiatrist Dr. Khristine Eroshevich tried desperately to save the doomed model in her waning years. All three defendants pleaded not guilty.

Will Kristen and Rob get some time together? WE'RE STARTING TO BE THANKFUL THERE ARE ONLY FOUR OF THESE MOVIES With filming on Eclipse, the third Twilight film, finished, Kristen Stewart and Robert Pattinson may get a little time to themselves. Which is good, because some sources are claiming their relationship is on the rocks. In fact, OK! Magazine reported last week that the pair had broken up. "Rob was talking marriage," a source told the magazine. "The relationship was also stealing all of Kristen's attention and keeping her from spending time with her friends and family. She told him they need to take a break." But Stewart's rep was quick to quash that rumour, telling Showbiz Spy, "Do you really consider source?" news METRO WORLD NEWS

ARIES MARCH 21-APRIL 20

Your ideas are as good as anyone else's ideas — indeed, they are better — but you seem to think that you are not as smart as people you're up against.

SEPT 23-OCT 23

Make every word count today. Don't bother with explanations or clarifications, just say what you have to say and leave no one in any doubt.

TAURUS APRIL 21-MAY 21

A full moon in your sign means you'll have a hard time controlling your emotions today, but maybe that's good because you've been bottled up inside.

OCT 24-NOV 22 As the moon is full in your opposite sign of Taurus today it will pay you to be considerate of other people's feelings

(g)

MAY 22-JUNE 21 According to the planets, loved ones have a lot on their minds at the moment and they cannot easily deal with more than one thought at a time.

On the web

SAGITTARIUS

NOV 23-DEC 21
Both the full moon in Taurus and Mercury at odds with Mars urge you to get your head out of the clouds and focus on

CANCER

JUNE 22-JULY 22 The less you reveal about your plans the better. Refuse to be drawn on what you are up to: There is money and prestige at stake

CAPRICORN DEC 22-JAN 20

You may find it hard to stay focused today as the full moon pulls you in two directions at once. Hard, however, is not the same as impossible.

LEO JULY 23-AUG 23

You are not the type to lose your head and crack under pressure. Someone who envies your success and popularity will turn up the heat today.

AQUARIUS

JAN 21-FEB 18
Be honest with friends and colleagues today, even if what you have to tell them is clearly not what they were hoping to hear.

VIRGO AUG 24-SEPT 22

With Mercury, planet of communication, under pressure at the moment, it's unlikely you will get the response you seek this side of tomorrow

PISCES FFR 19-MARCH 20

Plans you make today and during the first few days of the week will pay off in a big way next weekend, but only if they are rational and reasonable.
